About

The Association of Clinical Research Professionals (ACRP) works to improve quality in clinical research by directly impacting the professionals conducting clinical trials. ACRP leads innovation in clinical research workforce development by setting standards for professional competence, and building and validating competence in the workforce.

ACRP's diverse members and certificants work in a variety of practice settings, roles, and specialty areas, with a wide range of experience in clinical research. What's common about them all is their dedication and commitment to promoting excellence in clinical research.
