About

Founded in 1942, the American Association for Marriage and Family Therapy (AAMFT) is the only major professional organization serving marriage and family therapists in the U.S. and abroad. Members are mental health professionals who are involved in the fastest growing mental health discipline - treating/diagnosing mental and emotional disorders & other health & behavioral problems in the family system.

AAMFT members routinely treat a wide array of clients & address problems including: substance abuse, eating disorders, stress & anxiety, depression, premarital issues, domestic violence, divorce, marital & couple relationship problems, child & adolescent behavioral problems, parenting issues, blended/step family issues, and other mental & emotional disorders of the individual, couple or family. AAMFT members work within inpatient facilities, employee assistance, health maintenance, schools, social service agencies, business, research centers, medical facilities & private practices. 60% female; 40% male.
